SiloSmashers Wins U.S. Department of Transportation Contract to Support
Office of Infrastructure on Readiness Assessment Project

New Contract Facilitates Growth of the Company's Transportation Business Unit

Fairfax, VA – April 19, 2011 – SiloSmashers, Inc., a privately-owned strategy, management, and technology consulting firm, today announced a contract win to support the Department of Transportation (DOT) Office of Infrastructure on a readiness assessment for Performance-Based Management and Professional Capacity Building (PMPCB) for the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA). The new contract contributes to the expansion of SiloSmashers' Transportation business unit.

Under the terms of the contract, SiloSmashers will conduct research regarding competency needs and preparedness for implementing a PMPCB program. The readiness assessment will include the identification of performance-based management knowledge and skills sets (competencies), and the creation of a plan for developing a PMPCB program that provides key resources, training, guidance, policies, and other materials for the FHWA's workforce and transportation professionals across the country. The goal of the PMPCB program is to enable FHWA to successfully translate measurable goals and objectives into highway investment strategies and actions in order to demonstrate and ensure predictable levels of system performance. For this effort, SiloSmashers will provide a broad range of services and expertise in the areas of program management, performance management, collaborative stakeholder involvement, concept development, technical documentation development, curricula and technical training development.

“This contract award reinforces SiloSmashers successful partnership with DOT,” said Robb Jolly, SiloSmashers' Vice President of Transportation. “We have a commitment to DOT to provide expert professionals with knowledge and experience in the transportation industry, coupled with our innovative and collaborative management strategies and solutions, to deliver value, quality and measurable results that ensure mission success.”
