

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Daniel Thompson Promoted to Vice President of SiloSmashers' Homeland Defense Business Unit

Thompson's Expertise Leveraged to Expand Services Delivery on Large-Scale, Cross-Government Projects

Fairfax, VA – November 29, 2011 – SiloSmashers, Inc., a privately-owned, strategy, technology and management consulting firm serving the public sector, announced today the appointment of Daniel Thompson to the position of business unit vice president for Homeland Defense. In his new position, Mr. Thompson will be responsible for setting strategy and leading efforts to enhance services support and expand an already broad footprint within the Department of Homeland Security, as well as other federal law enforcement agencies.

Mr. Thompson brings to the company more than 30 years of experience in enterprise IT program management and financial management. He has a rich background in strategic and technical planning, budgeting and cost control, systems development, and IT policy and governance. Prior to joining SiloSmashers, he was a senior program management consultant for Infinite Resources where he provided technical planning and program support and program management office (PMO) support across a number of critical programs for U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Before that time, Mr. Thompson served as a senior program management consultant for TacWorld/SAIC. He has also held management positions at XaSystems, GovPlace, McFadyen Solutions, SCI and EDS.

“We are very pleased and excited to welcome Dan Thompson to the SiloSmashers team,” commented Angela Drummond, SiloSmashers founder and CEO. Dan’s experience and expertise, particularly in the areas of enterprise program management and financial management, will serve to further differentiate us from the competition in successfully delivering large-scale, cross-government, IT-related program management services and solutions.”
